have never sold better than at present

A reader of THE CITY OF BEAUTIFUL NONSENSE says:
"This book is so charming, so absorbing, and so much the best of all the books which I have recently read that I feel like reading nothing else for the time being."

THE BLUE BIRD has been called "the most idyllic and exquisite bit of literature produced this season," and "one of the most perfect and exquisite bits of fairy drama ever written."

MAYBLOOM AND MYRTLE

Poems by Samuel Minturn Peck

Author of "Cap and Bells," "Alabama Sketches," etc.

These poems are purely lyrical. Mr. Peck does not attempt the epic or the dramatic. Some of them are of that fascinating sort usually termed vers de societe, for lack of a better phrase to define it. Some style such poems patrician rhymes. Many of the lyrics treat of love, others of nature, others still give shy and unexpected glimpses into deeper recesses of the human heart. None are pretentious, and all display a grace, a lightness of touch, a lilt and charm that are Mr. Peck's own.

To the Booksellers:

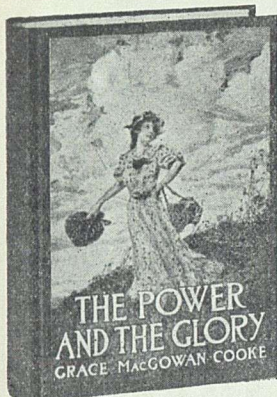

The undersigned beg to announce for early fall publication

"The Bunnikins-Bunnies in Europe,"
by Miss Edith B. Davidson, author of "The Bunnikins-Bunnies in Camp," which proved so delightful to little folks last fall, and to state that this is the only new Bunnikins-Bunnies book to be published this year. The book by Miss Davidson which has been announced by another house is not one of the Bunnikins-Bunnies Series and has no connection with it, dealing with entirely different characters.

"The Bunnikins-Bunnies in Europe" will be published on October 15th, and will be uniform in size with "The Bunnikins-Bunnies in Camp." Price 50 cents net.

Very truly yours,

¶ A romance of the girl who wore the “Sandals of Joy”

THE POWER AND THE GLORY

By Grace MacGowan Cooke

Author of “Mistress Joy,” “Huldah,” etc.

JOHNNIE CONSADINE, this girl of a Southern mountain town, is dowered with the gaiety, the courage, the clearer vision which fate sometimes bestows on those of whom much is asked. Coming from the quiet of a mountain home, this woman's heart and soul open like a flower under conditions which wilt and scorch less hardy spirits; and in her every-day life there shines an unflinching optimism and an undaunted courage which are as rare as they are refreshing. Miss Cooke has given us a truly notable book in this romance of an upspringing heart.

A Critical Analysis of Rostand's Play

By MARCO F. LIBERMAProfessor of Romance Languages in Cincinnati University*

Illustrated, 12mo. 75 cents net. By mail, 82 cents

A brilliant, sympathetic, extremely graphic account of Rostand's celebrated play, dealing with the interesting history of its conception, writing and first performances, together with a description of the story and a critical analysis of it as a work of dramatic and literary art as well as a stage performance. It is exactly the book that everybody needs just now, as it is highly informing about every essential detail of the story and original production, and yet in no manner whatever a substitute for the play itself. In fact, this book, in addition to its other uses, will prove the best possible preparation for anyone intending to either see or read the play itself.

It is illustrated with drawings from the original performances.

*A GREAT STUDY IN FICTION OF SOCIAL CONDITIONSTHE HOUSE OF BONDAGEBy REGINALD WRIGHT KAUFFMAN

12mo. $1.35 net. By mail, $1.47

This is a powerful novel of the White Slaves.

Long before the recent extensive publication of the findings of those engaged in hunting out this hideous evil, Mr. Kauffman was living in a tenement house on the famous East Side of New York City studying it face to face. No one knew his mission of knowledge, no one took him for anything more than he appeared to be, a simple, hard-working citizen with perhaps a little more curiosity than the common run of his neighbors. He was very successful. In the most natural way in this moving story is the first result. Mr. Kauffman has told it vividly, startlingly, truthfully. It will hold the reader hard to the end, whether the background interests him or not, on account of its sheer power as a human tale. As a picture of life, it is wonderful. As a story, it grips tight. It is altogether likely to make a deep impression.

NOTES IN SEASON.

OWEN JOHNSON has changed the title of his Lawrenceville story, published as "The Eternal Boy," to "The Prodigious Hickey," the title originally chosen.

DODD, MEAD & COMPANY report two books which have lived longer than the traditional six months, and show no falling-off in popularity. "These are "The City of Beautiful Nonsense," by E. Temple Thurston and "The Blue Bird," by Maurice Maeterlinck; both have gone through more than six editions.

HENRY HOLT & COMPANY announce that William De Morgan's new novel, "An Affair of Dishonor" will be published August 16th. A cable from England set an unexpectedly early date of issue, and the firm's travelers have, therefore, no time to canvass the trade, and it is hoped that dealers will send in their advance orders without further solicitation. The book is uniform with "Joseph Vance," "Alice-For-Short," and the other De Morgan novels.

LOVERS of R. L. S. will delight in the Riverside Press edition of "Pan's Pipes," which the Houghton Mifflin Company has just issued. It is printed from type on a special quality of Italian hand-made paper and decorated with medallions of fauns and satyrs adapted from old engraved gems. The binding is of brilliant red paper boards, stamped with a representation of a maze, also taken from an old gem. The edition is limited to 550 numbered copies.

ONE of Dana Estes & Company's most attractive summer offerings is their new series Beautiful England. The volumes are printed on good paper and each one has twelve reproductions of water colors, mounted and inserted as plates, that have been made expressly for the series by Ernest Haslehurst. The text in each case has been written by a competent and well-known writer. The six volumes now ready are "Oxford," by F. D. How; "Canterbury," by Walter Jerrold; "The Lakes," by A. G. Bradley; "Shakespeare's Country," by Canon Danks; "Wind-sor," by Edward Thomas; "The Thames," by C. E. Mitton.

BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY announce four juveniles for the Fall trade. Josephine Scribner Gates has two new books, "Live Dolls' Party Days" which promises to be as popular as its predecessors in the series; the other, "Sunshine Annie; or, the Girl of the Doll-Shop," tells of a little orphan girl who goes to work in the doll department of a toy shop. Raymond MacDonald Alden's "The Palace made by Music," relates how men through the leading of a little child learned to make music together, and of the palace they raised by the harmony of their hearts and instruments. An exciting athletic story for boys will be found in "Dick Randall, the Young Athlete," by Ellery H. Clark, who has himself twice held the all-around amateur athletic championship of America and was a victor in the Olympic Games.

MOFFAT, YARD & COMPANY have nearly ready "The Story of Chanticleer; a Critical Analysis of Rostand's Play," by Marco F. Liberma, professor of Romance languages in Cincinnati University, which gives graphic account of the play, the history of its conception, writing and first performance with a critical analysis of the work. The book is illustrated with drawings from the original performances. Another book which this same house will issue shortly is "The House of Bondage," by Reginald Wright Kauffman. This is said to be a powerful novel of the "white slaves," the material for which the author gathered at first hand, during a prolonged residence in an East Side tenement. The firm calls particular attention to "Life and Letters of Edmund Clarence Stedman," by Laura Stedman, his granddaughter, a biography of great importance and interest from every point of view.

A story of the Boer War. The heroine is a foundling who has been brought up in a convent in Guelderloep, South Africa. In the same town is a much wronged Englishman, known as the Dop Doctor, because he has let himself go and become a drunkard. The siege of the town and the services he renders the sick and wounded give him the necessary brace and he gives up drinking. He marries the girl, who does not love him, and takes her to England. The rest of the book tells of his struggle against his old enemy and his fall, and of his wife's gradual awakening to the fact that she loves her husband and that he needs her.

John Kenton, who, though innocent, has submitted to imprisonment to save his brother, drifts to a village where he becomes a railroad bookkeeper. Here he meets a girl, who is quite as unfortunate as he, and after the man's identity is discovered and he is dismissed, both of them start for New York. They are taken for man and wife and allow the mistake to stand in order to escape the girl's pursuers. The young woman has strong convictions against marriage, and the rest of the story tells of the working out of her scheme of existence.

A comprehensive work by the curator of reptiles of the New York Zoological Park and author of "Reptiles of America." The book gives in a popular form a survey of the reptiles of the world. The information, while arranged for the general reader, is thoroughly scientific and will be valuable to teachers, scientists and curators of zoological institutions. Among the original features of the book are detailed information relating to the growth and rearing of crocodiles, the care of reptiles requiring peculiar treatment, and the results in general of the experience of a reptile collector. There is a check list of genera, showing the number of species and general disposition of all the known reptiles of the world. Index.

The hero has an unconquerable aversion to physical ugliness and deformity of all kinds, and is thereby estranged from the girl to whom he is engaged, and who becomes lame by an accident. He leaves

England at once to visit his father and mother at their estate, Mon Paradis, on the Mediterranean, and soon discovers that the place is ill named, for every one in it is oppressed by a melancholy that he cannot at first comprehend. Finally his father tells him that there is confined in a remote tower his elder brother, who came into the world a hideous monstrosity, and whose very existence has been kept a secret ever since. This is the "unseen thing" which haunts the hero for months before he frees himself from the incubus.

Mr. Loch has written a comprehensive and interesting study of charity from its earliest manifestations among primitive people, through the Greek and Roman civilizations to Jewish and Christian charity. The economic and social aspects of the subject are considered and also the English Poor-Laws and methods for relief. He sums up thus, "all rests on the right handling and helping of those who are, or may fall, into distress. Good citizenship, no less than faithfulness to religious ideals, demands this. Cannot all, putting aside lesser matters of difference, try to find an orthodoxy in charity and charitable method?" Index.

Peter Brothwick, father of Lord Glenesk, was editor of the paper and in 1850 sent his son Algernon, then but twenty years old, to Paris as the Post's accredited correspondent. Thus began Lord Glenesk's connection with the paper, which only ended with his death in 1908, when he had been editor-proprietor for many years. He was a member of Parliament, the friend of most of the famous people of his time, letters to and from whom are freely quoted in the book, a man greatly esteemed and of much influence in his party (Tory). In 1895, Queen Victoria created Algernon Brothwick a peer; he had already been made a baronet. The book is the record of a career of honorable and successful achievement.

Mr. Neale's address is divided under three heads: The American kingdoms (1578-1783); The American republics (1783-1865); The American absolute monarchy (1865-1910). The idea which runs through the book is that the original colonies were little sovereignties under British rule, after the Revolution they became so many republics, but still retained their sovereign individuality. Then came the Civil War and the states were forced into becoming one nation, which according to Mr. Neale was absolutely unjust and tyrannous.

The Publishers' Weekly

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT

July 30, 1910

The editor is not responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

Publishers should send books promptly for weekly record and descriptive annotation, if possible in advance of publication. The Record of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

CENSORSHIP PAR EXCELLENCE.

WE learn from the daily papers that a surprisingly large number of very well known novels were recently banished from the shelves of a large middle western library. After finding the clever satire of "Ann Veronica" and the more or less pathetic humor of "Mr. Polly" condemned on the list, among others, as "sordid;" Mr. Robert W. Chambers denominated "of no interest;" and Mr. Robert Herrick's recent sociologic study "Together" thrown out as "questionable;" one is surprised only to notice the omission of "Septimus," "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and the "Bird's Christmas Carol."

It is—fortunately or unfortunately—true that the most potent argument against many a reform is, paradoxically speaking, the reform itself. And of no reform is this more true than of book censorship. How difficult it is to draw the line; how quickly the attempt to do so leads to utter absurdity is shown nowhere more clearly than in this recent public library pronouncement.

No one realizes more keenly than the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, the necessity of a clear-cut stand for decency in literature, no one regrets more keenly the occasional necessity of defining that stand in concrete instances.

But, if we are to believe the newspaper reports, the librarians of the Detroit and Minneapolis public libraries—both are named in the press notices—are not discriminating against these books on moral grounds, but on grounds of personal opinion as to what is most "suitable" for book readers in their respective cities. One admits that both the "literary merit" and the "morality" of the books banned "are unquestioned." "They are simply regarded" by the librarian in charge, we are told, "as unsuitable."

Such an assumption of discriminative labor is, in the first place, unfair to the librarian. Think of the tremendous responsibility of deciding upon "suitable" reading for several hundred thousand people, and especially of choosing between books of equally high literary merit, of excellent moral tone and, by the consensus of cultivated people, clever and interesting as well. It is a task which most of us would wish to shirk.

And the grounds given for condemnation? If "Tono-Bungay" be "sordid," so also is "Les Misérables"; if "Together" be somewhat heterodox from a sociologic standpoint, how can "The Servant in the House" hope to pass; if "The Danger Mark" be uninteresting, what can be said for "Lord Ormont and his Araminta"?

SIMULTANEOUSLY with the appearance of the new biennial volume of "Who's Who in America" we are in receipt of a circular from another "Who's Who in —," a fair type of that flood of pseudo biographical dictionaries which, however legitimate they may be as sharp business propositions, cannot help but bring discredit on the whole "Who's Who" series of publications.

The character of these alleged "selective compilations" may be judged from the following quotations (the italics are ours):

"Owing to the cosmopolitan character of the work, only biographical sketches of persons on our eligible list can be inserted, and all statements of fact are subject to editorial verification. Positively no charge is made for inserting the sketches, but all persons referred to are expected to subscribe in advance for one complete copy of the work, to be delivered within ten days after its binding.

"The next edition will be illustrated by portraits and heraldic coats-of-arms.

"I am informed by the editor that your name is on the revised list of eligibles."

The "portraits" and "coats-of-arms" of course come extra, at so much per.

It may at once be put down as axiomatic that no method of selection predicated on previous subscription makes the book worth consideration as a reference work. The appeal to vanity is, however, so insidious that there is little doubt that the enterprise is to the promoters financially worth while.

MOTOR VS. RAIROAD MAIL TRANSPORTATION.

THE report that Postmaster-General Hitchcock has a large force of statisticians at work upon a more searching investigation of railway mail transportation than has yet been made calls attention to the fact that the English Postmaster-General has a direct and efficient method of keeping down railroad rates for the transportation of mail matter, by introducing motor transportation in competition with them when necessary. The automobile trucks used are specially built for long distance mail service, and are owned and operated by the government.

For years the post-office has been transporting mail matter from London to such nearby cities as Portsmouth, Dover, Hastings and Southampton in automobile trucks. The post-office, finding the automobile mail service to the towns mentioned very successful and economical, has inaugurated a new automobile service to Birmingham, and intermediate towns. Birmingham is 110 miles from London. This will be the longest automobile mail route in the country.

The post-office policy is to establish automobile routes to cities that can be reached from London within ten, eight and six hours. Thus the automobile truck can take out mails from London when they are sorted after the close of business hours and deliver them in time for distribution early next morning in towns from fifty to 150 miles distant. The service is said to be much cheaper than if it was performed by the railroads.

Unfortunately our greater distances preclude the possibility of a similar service here.

A SIDE LIGHT ON FRANK A. MUNSEY.

IN the latest "confessions" of the American Publishing world, John Adams Thayer's recently published autobiography "Astir; a Publisher's Life Story," there are many interesting anecdotes of contemporary magazine men and things. Perhaps the most interesting, however, is the inside story, in documentary detail, of Thayer's month and a day position as advertising manager of the Munsey publications.

Thayer had had twenty years previous varied experience in every branch of publishing work from compositor and typefounder to travelling salesman, type expert and advertising man. In six years he had risen to an enviable success as advertising manager of The Ladies' Home Journal. Having resigned the latter position of his own accord to take service with Mr. Munsey at a salary and under conditions which made a mild sensation in the advertising world, having won a splendid professional and personal reputation, one can imagine the jolt when just twenty-eight days after the change Mr. Munsey wrote him a letter which read in part as follows:

"I HAVE been studying you I suppose about as closely as I should expect you to study a new man in your department. . . .

"In a word, you are not the strong man I expected you to be. You have shown nothing of the versatility I expected to find in you, nothing of the alertness of temperament I expected to find in you. You have brought no new ideas to the house, no new ideas to the advertising department. You have brought no business, either directly or indirectly, to the advertising department in the four weeks you have been here—not so much as a line. You have shown no extraordinary genius in your correspondence; you have written no advertising, have got up no advertising. And in your handling of the force you have not evidenced any remarkable executive ability or even first rate diplomacy.

"When you complained yesterday that I did not show sufficient confidence in you, I replied that you had done nothing yet to command my confidence. You answered that it was three months before you did anything at 'The Ladies' Home Journal' [sic]. Be this as it may, I submit to you that there is a wide difference between the young man direct from a typefoundry, with absolutely no knowledge of the advertising business, and no pretence of knowledge of the advertising business, and on a nominal salary—between such a man and a giant in the business, a full-grown man, a fully equipped man, a great big salaried man. From the one I should not expect much, from the other I have every right to expect a great deal.

"Such answers as these on this point show a lack on your part of a closely reasoning mind, and no man can appeal to me, can command my confidence in a managerial position unless he shows well-thought-out reasons for every act, every move he makes, every statement he makes. This is only one of the instances that lead me to believe that you are not a close reasoner. Moreover, your tendency towards red tape, your tendency to surround yourself with a halo of exaggerated importance, your petty jealousy when a man from the advertising department comes to me, or I send to him to come to me—all this is extremely distasteful to me, and will not go for a minute in this house."

Mr. Thayer's letter in reply was as direct and breezy as his chief's.

Mr. Munsey had thought himself mistaken in selecting Mr. Thayer. How much mistaken he was in letting him go after events showed, when Thayer, after a year on the Boston Journal, came back to New York to the task of renovating the Delineator's advertising department.

How he succeeded with that erstwhile black sheep among periodicals is now past history. How Mr. Thayer, with Erman J. Ridgway and Geo. W. Wilder, the head of the Butterick Publishing Co., bought Everybody's and the story of the latter magazine's spectacular rise form, of course, the most interesting part of the present book. There is mighty little connected with Thomas W. Lawson that isn't interesting, whatever else it is; and, after all, it was Lawson that "made" Everybody's.

OBITUARY NOTES.

AYERS M. EDWARDS, New England manager of the educational department of the Macmillan Company, died in Boston Thursday last week. Mr. Edwards was connected with the Macmillan Company for four years and was engaged in the school book publishing trade for sixteen years. He was born in Bethel, Me., in 1857, and was graduated from Bowdoin College in the class of 1880.

LEOPOLD DELISLE, the historian, a member of the French Institute, died last week Friday. He was born at Valognes, La Manche, in 1826. He was grand officer of the Legion of Honor and a member of the Académie des Inscriptions et belles-lettres. He was educated at the Ecole des Chartes. His works dealt mainly with subjects of French history. Among them were "Études et l'état de l'agriculture en Normandie au moyen âge," "Le Cabinet et les Manuscrits de la Bibliothèque Nationale," "Mémoires sur les figures de l'Apocalypse," and many bibliographical works.

PERIODICAL NOTES.

LORD ALFRED DOUGLAS, it is announced, has sold the London Academy to a syndicate, and henceforward will be in no way responsible for the conduct of the paper. T. W. H. Crossland has also left the Academy.

PROBABLY the oddest journal in the world is a Spanish illustrated comic weekly called the Cut Cloth, which is printed on cloth the size of a handkerchief and costs five cents a number. After it has been read it is to be put in water, when the ink disappears and leaves a handkerchief behind.

A NEW monthly journal devoted to the inventor class is the International Inventor, to be published in the Tribune Building, New York City, by the International Publicity Company, composed of Julius Wodiska, Richard F. ("Tody") Hamilton and Allen Samuel Williams. Mr. Wodiska is a manufacturer and author of "A Book of Precious Stones," published last year by the Putnams, and long a member of the New York Press Club. Mr. Williams has served in various positions on metropolitan dailies and was formerly press agent of Madison Square Garden and of various exposition projects. "Tody" Hamilton, who needs no introduction to newspaper men, since his retirement from promoting publicity for the Barnum & Bailey show, shortly before the death of the late James A. Bailey, resides in Baltimore, but will return to live in this city. Both Mr. Wodiska and he are inventors and interested financially in patented inventions. Their experiences incline them to believe that inventors want a paper, and they think they know what kind the inventors want.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

MEREDITH NICHOLSON's new novel, "The Siege of the Seven Suits," is announced for publication this autumn by Houghton Mifflin Company.

DANA ESTES & COMPANY have recently issued a volume of poems, "Maybloom and Myrtle," by Samuel Minturn Peck, author of "Cap and Bells," "Alabama Sketches," etc. The poems are purely lyrical and treat of many and varied aspects of nature and feeling.

E. P. DUTTON & Co., have just ready "Gathered Leaves from the Prose of Mary E. Coleridge," with a memoir by her friend Edith Sichel. The book contains stories, essays and unpublished poems by the gifted woman who died in 1907 at the early age of forty-six.

G. E. STECHERT & Co. have issued as one of their Anastatic Reprints Augusta Theodosia Drane's "Christian Schools and Scholars; or, Sketches of Education from the Christian Era to the Council of Trent." This reprint is from the second edition published in London in 1881.

Two books which open the treasures of "Plutarch's Lives" to children are "The Children's Plutarch, Tales of the Greeks," and "The Children's Plutarch, Tales of the Romans," by F. J. Gould. The books have an introduction by William Dean Howells and are illustrated by Walter Crane. Harper & Brothers are the publishers.

WESSELS & BISSELL issue this week an addition to the books of critical appreciation of Scott. The Hon. Albert S. G. Canning author of "History in Scott's Novels," has written "Sir Walter Scott Studied in Eight Novels," which deals with each of the eight novels individually and then has a chapter of general criticism of Scott's writings.

NEALE PUBLISHING COMPANY, Washington, D. C., have just issued two books dealing with Virginia. The period immediately following the Reconstruction is the setting for "The Betrayal," by Walter Neale and Elizabeth H. Hancock. In "The Sovereignty of the States," by Walter Neale, is an emphatic statement of the author's belief in states rights.

FETCHING rhymes each illustrated with a full page drawing done in colors are the prime favorites with smaller children, and this is what "The Discontented Stuffed Cat, and Other Moral Tales," to be published in August by The Saalfeld Publishing Company, Akron, Ohio, is. Both rhymes and illustrations are the work of Clara Bell Thurston, by no means an unknown person in the realm of juvenile literature.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY have just ready two books of biography. The first is an account of frontier life in 1866 by one who had actual and tragic experience of the Indian fights in Wyoming; this is "My Army Life and Fort Phil. Kearney Massacre," by Frances C. Carrington. The other book is a two volume work by Charles Henry Jones, "The Life and Public Services of J. Glancy Jones," the Democratic statesman of the time of the Mexican and Civil Wars.

"THE Book of the Flower Show," by Charles H. Curtis, F.R.H.S., the new addition to the John Lane Company's "Handbooks of Practical Gardening," will appeal to many beside those who have the conduct of the many flower shows held annually throughout the United States. The chapters devoted to the several varieties of cut flowers and fruits, containing an account of the merits and faults of the various varieties, as well as other valuable hints, will be valuable to many housewives who wish an effective dinner table. The numerous illustrations are a particular attraction.

It is announced that in connection with the University of London, a Press company has been formed to carry on officially the work of printing and publishing under the ægis of the university, somewhat on the lines of the University Presses of Oxford and Cambridge. London university, by the way, is, unless we are mistaken, merely an examining body, without teaching force. It is believed that the volume of work to be handled by the new company, which is to be known as the University of London Press, Ltd., will necessitate a working capital of £50,000, upwards of £32,000 of which has been subscribed privately.

Two new volumes have been added to The Guide Series which the Baker & Taylor Company publish. "A Guide to Biography for Young Readers, American—Men of Mind," by Burton E. Stevenson, gives sketches of authors, painters, actors, scientists, philanthropists and others, who owe their eminence to mental ability. Esther Singleton's "A Guide to Great Cities for Young Travelers and Others, Northwestern Europe," has much information about ten cities in England, Ireland, Scotland, Holland, Germany, Denmark and Sweden.

New sciences spring up almost daily in these days of social and mechanical progress. Mrs. Ellen H. Richards is responsible for the latest of these and in her book "Euthenics, the Science of Controllable Environment," published by Whitcomb & Barrows, she explains what it is. The new science is the betterment of living, through conscious endeavor, for the purpose of securing efficient human beings. It should precede eugenics as that deals with race improvement through heredity, while euthenics is for the present generation, and therefore should be the foundation for the other.

OUTSIDE of New York City, Los Angeles and Washington are said to be the largest retail post-card markets in the United States. The daily sale in Los Angeles is about 5000, and in Washington it is about 4500. The statistics for New York are not available, although it has a regularly organized post-card board of trade. One Washington post-card firm, which has two stores, carries a stock of over 25,000 different designs. Outside of large cities, Mount Vernon, the home and tomb of Washington, is the largest post-card market in the country. During the summer season the sales average about $100 a day.

SENATOR DANIEL, of Virginia, is the author of a standard work on "Negotiable Instruments." On one occasion he explained to a friend how he came to write it, says Law Notes. "It was this way," he said. "Somebody asked me whether a sight draft bore interest, and I couldn't tell him. I was so ashamed of my ignorance that I determined to master the question at once, and from my study on this point I got the idea of writing a book on the subject." "Well, Senator," asked the friend, "does a sight draft bear interest?" Senator Daniel reflected for some moments, and then replied, "I declare, I have forgotten."

A BOOK of power though of unpleasant subject is published by John W. Luce & Co., this week. It is "The Unseen Thing," by Anthony Dyllington, author of "The Green Domino." The story tells of the misfortunes which an unconquerable physical repulsion for anything deformed, brings upon the hero. "The Unseen Thing" is his elder brother who was born an unspeakable monstrosity and whose existence is only revealed when the young fellow has become a man. Another book from the same firm describes the college activities of Col. Roosevelt. The volume is the work of Donald Wilhelm and is called "Theodore Roosevelt as an Undergraduate."

THERE is something deeply inspirational in the triumph of a brave and beautiful girl over the oppression and cruelty of factory labor. Human, tender and sweet, with an ever-responsive smile, Johnny Consedine, who in spite of her name is the heroine, not the hero, of Grace MacGowan Cooke's new novel, "The Power and the Glory," published by Doubleday, Page & Company, comes down from the pure mountain air of her childhood to work in the stifling atmosphere and whirling din of the cotton mill. Trials crowd thickly upon her from the start. But buoyantly certain and determinedly delighted with everything, no matter how hard the way, her superb courage and never faltering hope carry her through the blackest waters of despair to a victory worth while.

H. G. WELLS in a recent letter to his American publishers, who are to bring out this Fall his latest work, "The New Machiavelli," denies that he is the author of any of "George Meek: Bath Chairman" except the preface. "I cannot understand," writes Mr. Wells, "the mental quality of the people who can suppose that I should deliberately write a lying preface over my own signature to a book by myself, stating in the clearest manner that I did not write it." He goes on to say that the whole idea is absurd because of its impossibility. "George Meek is a very real and inimitable human being, and I am about as capable of fabricating his work as he is of fabricating mine. Will you please make this denial public in whatever manner you think best."

HENRY HOLT & COMPANY announce that, although the Christmas holidays of course are the prime times for juveniles, nevertheless they are having now, in midsummer, to print new editions of a half dozen of these books for the young. In addition to Mrs. Etta Anthony Baker's "The Youngsters of Centerville," which has already been mentioned, these reprints include the eighth of Mrs. Carroll Watson Rankin's "Dandelion Cottage," and the fifth of her "Girls of Gardenville;" the seventh of Charles Pierce Burton's "Boys of Bob's Hill," and the second of its sequel, "The Bob's Cave Boys;" while Miss Constance D'Arcy Mackay's "The House of the Heart and Other Plays for Children," which has but recently been issued, is already going into a new printing.

AUGUST is to bring forth many new books with the imprint of Frederick A. Stokes Company upon their title-pages. "Watteau" will be the subject of the new book in the Masterpieces in Color Series, already so well known. Another art book is "Three French Painters of the 18th Century: Le Brun, Chardin and Fragonard." The Thumb-o-graph Series has three additions in "The Truth About My Friends," "Secret Signatures of My Friends," and "The People I Meet," all of which are designed to supplant by novel methods the old-fashioned autograph album. Gift books de luxe and those in less pretentious guise but none the less welcome as remembrances are found among the volumes announced. "Confessions of St. Augustine," edited by E. B. Pusey and A. Ransome's "A Book of Friendship" are among the more elaborate books, while the four little Rosemary Booklets fill the demand for simpler gifts. A. Ransom is the author of another book to be ready in August, "A History of Story-telling," which promises to be most interesting. History is represented by Percy Withers' "Egypt of Yesterday and To-day," and H. R. Wadleigh's "Munich, History, Monuments and Arts."

NOTES ON FALL BOOKS.

THE late Sir William Butler, author of "The Great Lone Land," left a volume of reminiscences which will probably be published in the autumn. It ought to be an uncommonly entertaining book. The author had for some time been engaged upon a life of Napoleon, but it is said to be doubtful if it had reached a stage which admits of publication.

OCTOBER will bring a "Bunnikins-Bunnies" book, the only one to appear this year. Miss Edith B. Davidson's new volume is to be called "The Bunnikins-Bunnies in Europe" and will be uniform with "The Bunnikins-Bunnies in Camp," last Fall's book which so delighted the little folks. The books are published by the Houghton Mifflin Company.

THE latest book of that leading juvenile writer, James Otis, has to do with wireless telegraphy, motor boat cruises off the Maine coast, and similar matters of which the author is well qualified to speak. Also an interesting and profitable experiment in breeding silver foxes for their skins, on an island twelve miles from the mainland, is described. The book is called "The Wireless Station at Silver Fox Farm," and is to be published in September by Thomas Y. Crowell & Company.

"Now," said the doctor, I'm going to show you the effect of alcohol upon your circulation.' I think it was 'circulation' he said; it may have been 'advertising.'" This is one of the opening paragraphs in the very last story that O. Henry wrote. He completed it only a few days before his death, and he got the material from his experiences in seeking relief from the very illness that was fatal to him. Like the very last line of one of his deep, whimsical stories, were the last conscious words he said. It was dark on Sunday morning, and he knew that he was going. "Turn on the lights, doctor," he said, and smiled. "I'm afraid to go home in the dark." The last volume of stories from his pen were gone over by him not a month before his death. Doubleday, Page & Co. will publish them next fall under the title of "Whirligigs."

STURGIS & WALTON COMPANY send us a fall list with much of interest. "The Lady," by Emily James Putnam, gives a series of imaginary portraits of the lady of different periods, with much as to her education, the conditions that made her what she was, the kind of man she married, her home, and many other details of her life and environment. A book which opens up the resources of New York City as a pleasure-ground for young people is Esther Singleton's "The Children's Cry." In it are described half-holiday jaunts, trips and outings that are at once delightful, healthful and informing. Two novels are also included among these autumn books, both of them with New England backgrounds. The first is William Farquhar Payson's "Periwinkle," a tale of the life-savers of Cape Cod, among whom "Periwinkle," a waif of the sea, is brought up. The other is by Frederick P. Ladd, and is called "The Lady of Shenipsit," and is said to be full of dramatic and passionate incidents.

Books Wanted

Under this head booktrade subscribers, under their own names, are given five nonpareil lines (exclusive of address) free advertisement for books out of print in any issue except special numbers, but not exceeding 100 lines a year. If over five lines are sent the excess is at 10 cents a line. Books not out of print, repeated matter, and all advertisements from non-subscribers, cost 10 cents a line. Objectionable books are excluded so far as they are noticed.

In answering, please state edition, condition and price, including postage or express charges. Houses that will deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis should put [Cash] after their firm-name. The appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the WEEKLY, does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it endeavors to safeguard its columns by withdrawing their use from irresponsible advertisers, booksellers should take usual precautions in extending credit.

Write your wants plainly, on one side of the sheet only. Illegible "wants" are ignored. The WEEKLY is not responsible for errors. Parties with whom there is no account must pay in advance.

A CIRCUIT RIDER'S WIFE

By CORRA HARRIS

In this book the wife of an itinerant Methodist preacher tells the story of his life, and of hers, for thirty years on a Southern circuit. It is a wonderful story of life among a crude people intensely in earnest about the salvation of their souls. Perhaps they were unfair to God, uncharitable to man and a little hypocritical toward themselves, but after all, they were tremendously in earnest, and in these modern days, moral earnestness is sadly lacking.

For thirty years this preacher and his wife ministered to the souls, minds and bodies of these Southern Methodists. The wife herself was a worldly girl, but she sympathized with the humanity in which she found herself, and she loved her husband. And in a sort of way she was religious, even if not in the old-fashioned Methodist way. She relates with quaint humor and keen insight her experiences in many churches with many families. Her comments on her husband, though loving, are as fair and impartial as her judgments of other people. Every now and then she brings you up with a start by some keen spiritual insight, or some telling epigram, strange spiritual ideas, quaint little heresies, grotesque sentiments, sometimes cynical and always interesting:

"This is because so many righteous people now, as in Christ's day, are the meanest, narrowest minded, moral snobs that the world can produce."

"No matter how intelligent a man is, or how scientific his method is, there is something in him that he can't think back to dust—an unknown formula that belongs to the unknown."

"For spiritual beings we do take with singular heartiness to the soil and spoils of this present world. The hope of immortality is more a fear than a hope with many of us."

And so this woman goes through the thirty years of helpful loving work. At last her husband breaks down. The stipend of a superannuated Methodist clergyman is generally between two and three hundred dollars a year. What else could the poor man do but die? And die he did.

After his death the wife visits a rich sister in New York. The glitter, deceit and shallowness of fashionable city life could make but a poor impression on this woman accustomed to the hard white light of spiritual truth. She concludes that if her people down South are narrow and crude, they are, nevertheless, interested and concerned with genuine, true things.

She says: "Up here the best, the wisest people do not know what the truth of God is. They think they can find it in science. Faith is for fools who cannot think. They are not trying to reconcile God to man, but man to God. . . . I have the first out and out orthodox feeling of being backslid I ever had in my life. And it was not going to theaters and tea-parties that brought it on. It was going to church every Sunday and hearing some preacher explain away the divinity of Jesus, or reduce His miracles to scientific formulas. I do not wonder that so many men and women go wrong in New York."

Readers of this book will be amply repaid with its combination of biography, novel and philosophy.

The New Doll Book for 1910

Live Dolls' Party Days

By JOSEPHINE SCRIBNER GATES

Mrs. Gates' Live Doll Books have made her famous and beloved. The new volume in the series is fully up to the standard of its popular predecessors.

"For these stories Josephine Scribner Gates deserves the gratitude of all little girls with doll children of their own."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Illustrated by VIRGINIA KEEP. $1.25

By the Author of "Why the Chimes Rang"

The Palace Made by Music

By RAYMOND MacDONALD ALDEN

"Why the Chimes Rang" has proved itself a children's classic. Seldom if ever has an American written a parable for children in such translucent English or with such tender feeling.

With a style as perfect, an emotion as simple and exquisite, the same author now tells how men, through the leading of a little child learned to make music together, and of the palace they raised by the harmony of their hearts and instruments.

With a decoration in color on every page by MAYO BUNKER. 50 cents net

By ELLERY H. CLARK

Author of "Loaded Dice," etc., and Twice All-Round Athletic Champion of America

Dick Randall, the Young Athlete

The author twice held the all-around amateur athletic championship of America and was a victor in the Olympic Games. He has written with expert knowledge an exciting athletic story for boys, full of high jumps and sprints and all the other feats of skill, strength and endurance that are performed on track and field.

How Dick Randall proved himself the champion of Fenton Academy, is a story to quicken the pulses of any healthy boy.

By the Author of "The Doll Books"

Sunshine Annie; or, The Girl of the Doll Shop

By JOSEPHINE SCRIBNER GATES

The heroine of this charming story is in some way related to James Whitcomb Riley's "Orphant Annie," and she does her little kinswoman great credit. Sunshine Annie has recently been taken from an orphan asylum and been given a place as helper in the doll department of a large toy store. Remembering her own experience in the orphan's home, she calls all her dolls orphans and tries to get them adopted; that is, bought by kindly customers. Out of this situation Mrs. Gates has built a delightful story.
